Crisis in English Politics Rapidly Approaching

Gladstone Believed to be Determined on Dissolution

Orangemen Arming for Resistance to Home Rule

[illegible]

LONDON, May 17.—It is reported that Mr [illegible] has replied to the queen that she [illegible] parliament under the majority [illegible] rule but is so great as to justify opposition. Understanding the government will [illegible] on the second reading, in passing Irish [illegible] Ministerialists say in event of the bill being carried by a small majority it will be [illegible] and if the majority against the bill [illegible] 40 the ministry will resign.

Talk of Dissolution.

LONDON, May 17.—In the lobby of the house of commons this evening, the subject of the dissolution of parliament was on every [illegible] the second week in July was mentioned as the time when the elections will most probably be held. Colonel Ponsonby, the queen's private secretary, visited Mr Gladstone today. It is understood he conveyed to the premier a message from the queen to the effect that her majesty is desirous that dissolution of parliament may be avoided, as she fears that course would have a disturbing influence on the business interests of the country.

The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a [illegible] statement, which will constitute the cabinet in the event of a change of ministry. It gives names are formal but by a prominent member in the present government. The list includes Hartington as premier, Mr Leonard Courtney, as chancellor of the exchequer, Mr Goschen as secretary of foreign affairs and Mr Chamberlain as colonial secretary for Ireland.

Home Rule Debate.

LONDON, May 17.—Debate on home rule was continued in the house tonight. Sir Richard Ashton Cross, conservative, was the first speaker. He said the bill would not secure good government for Ireland if it were passed. There would be two sets of judges in Ireland. One set would administer justice in revenue cases and the other set would administer justice in criminal cases. The former would be protected by the imperial parliament and the latter left to the Irish [illegible]. Gladstone had said [illegible] was elected by bribery, [illegible] the government was giving the Irish people of 3,000,000 pounds to Ireland. This was the first time he had heard such a charge. If it were true it would be a serious matter. He believed it would be found on trial if the members were not returned by bribery and fraud they would be found to represent the Irish people. He believed the Irish would consider justice, the Irish would find security, and that it was the interest of Ireland to remain united with England and maintain the imperial relationship. The Irish government bill [illegible] conservatives. He appealed to the government to drop the Irish bill and [illegible] the country. [Cheers.] He believed in Irish [illegible] and he thought it would satisfy the Irish [illegible] effect of the last union. [Cheers.]

Mr J. McDonald, member for Edinburgh, St Andrews university, presented a petition for granting home rule in Ireland. The petition was signed by 100,000 Scotchmen. It was [illegible] one fourth miles long, and [illegible] 4 pounds and was borne in to the house on the shoulders of a dozen stalwart men.

On motion of Mr Shaw Lefevre, liberal, the bill was [illegible] to morrow. John Morley [illegible] the house might expect to receive the bill embodying Chamberlain's view of the absolute supremacy of the imperial parliament, the retention of Irish members at Westminster and complete control of Irish affairs by the English parliament. Chamberlain declines to form a bill on the ground that it would be [illegible] by John Bright on the ground that it would be [illegible] Irish people. Morley said he believed the Irish would find security in the Gladstonian bill, that it was the interest of Ireland to remain united with England and maintain the imperial relationship. The Irish government bill [illegible] conservatives. He appealed to the government to drop the Irish bill and [illegible] the country. [Cheers.] He believed in Irish [illegible] and he thought it would satisfy the Irish people.

R. W. STEELE,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

Mr. Woerner has not yet been able to finish his business in this city. Several parties looked over his collection of etchings yesterday, but wanted more time to make selections. We hope many of his pictures will remain in the city.

Last night the council decided to put an iron bridge over the Monument on the Manitou road. The bridge is expensive, but it is in accordance with the general demand on the part of our heaviest taxpayers. It is an improvement that probably will not be made a second time in this generation.

W. E. Sheridan was not recognized when he came upon the stage last night which accounts for the absence of any applause when he first appeared. Sheridan is very popular here and his name did a good deal to draw the house last night. Had he been recognized no one would have received a kindlier greeting from a Colorado Springs audience.

English politics now look very squally. It is evident that the queen would like such a settlement as would change Hartington for Gladstone and yet not make a dissolution of parliament necessary. But this cannot be. Mr. Gladstone will continue his fight and if he cannot succeed in the house of commons, he will appeal to the people. We do not doubt the result of this appeal. The forty or more liberals who are now fighting him will be left at home. The liberals elected will be with him and he will have a more compact party behind him than ever. There can be no union that is lasting between the whigs and tories. Our dispatches state Salisbury's speech of Saturday night did a good deal to unite the liberals. There will be a good many such speeches with like effect in an election contest.

The Chieftain of Sunday morning had an interview with Fitz Mac in which Senator Hill was named for governor. The suggestion will cause a good deal of speculation, but that is all. We do not think the suggestion will be carried out, first because we do not believe Senator Hill wants the office, and secondly he would under no circumstances be a candidate while certain of his friends are in the field for certain nominations this fall. The contingency of the field being sufficiently open for him to be a candidate is too remote. The pith of the interview is in the following:

"Well, I am not authorized to speak for "Mr. Hill, and have never assumed to do "so. But from what I know I feel certain "he would accept the honor with gratitude "if it were offered to him. Why should he "not? The place is a distinguished public "trust, and he is eminently qualified to adorn "it, both socially and officially, if called to it. "It is an honor of which any man may justly "be proud, and Mr. Hill could not help but "feel that it is a signal distinction to be called "by the voice of the people to the first station "among them. I confess I should not be "sorry to see him have it. He has a fine family, and possesses the wealth and culture to "impart a high social distinction to the position. Mrs. Hill was noted among even the "most noted entertainers in Washington, "for combining in a happy degree the elegant "refinement of the east with the cordial and "bountiful hospitality of the west. They "have an interesting family of young people "and a large and beautiful home in Denver. "These are things we should consider. "Colorado is peculiarly situated. Every year "we have thousands upon thousands of visitors, and many of these are distinguished "foreigners. Many more are wealthy capitalists who might be induced to help our "young enterprises if properly impressed by "the social tone prevailing among us. It "is not what we owe to Senator Hill, but "what we owe to ourselves that I am considering, you see. Yet I think the governorship of a bright, intelligent, enterprising "young state like ours, should be an "honor reserved for such of her citizens "as have distinguished themselves in her service, and identified themselves with her "material progress. It is disgusting, it is degrading to see that high place handled "around among small politicians as the reward of enterprising trickery. The fact that "a man wants the place does not constitute a "claim upon it. No, I don't think Mr. Hill "can be said to want the place, and I certainly "do not admit that he has any claim upon it. "He has done a good deal for the party, but "the party has already squared that account. "Understand I am not speaking for "Senator Hill. I am speaking for "myself only with reference to what "I consider the highest interests of the state. "I say that Mr. Hill would adorn the office, "and would promote the interests of the state "by accepting it. Yes, I think he would accept it. We have a claim upon him. The "state has a claim upon every citizen who can "serve her. Senator Hill has a national reputation. His contributions on the silver issue "to the North American Review have made "his name familiar among statesmen and "economists in England, Germany and France. "It he should be elected in the near future "pretty certain that no one would have to ask "Who is governor of Colorado?"

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Creditably Presented at the Opera House by a Strong Company.

Last night the audience at the opera house had the pleasure of seeing one of Shakespeare's plays presented by the best stock company that has ever visited the Springs. We have had a great many single actors here who surpassed any one on the stage last night. But we never had in any one company so many good actors. The play is one that gives, as Furnivall says, "the highest type of woman that Shakespeare has yet drawn," and is distinguished among all his plays for its moral purpose and its stern teaching concerning the great problems of life and death. Yet the plot is one that is difficult to develop without some offense to a respectable modern audience. The version that was given was successful in paying respect to decency, and yet in not weakening the force of the play by modifying the plot. None of the great dramatist's plays demand better reading, because, as some one has said, "No composition of the same length in the language has left more of its expressive phases, its moral aphorisms, its brief sentences crowded with meaning fixed in the general memory, and embodied by daily use in the form of popular eloquence, argument and literature." The reading was particularly fine throughout the play, and this was the greatest source of pleasure. There was hardly any mouthing and the extreme beauty of many of the lines was not marred by indistinct utterance or bad elocution. This is worth emphasizing, because even Barrett and Booth usually have a support that painfully contrasts with themselves and thus lessens the pleasure of their performance. In Shakespeare at least there are no unimportant parts the lines of which may be indifferently read.

Miss Celia Alsberg appeared here for the first time as Isabel. It is rather ambitious for a young actress to attempt to portray so sublime a character. Yet she gave a fair representation. Her voice was good and her reading clear. In the scene with Claudio and the first scene with Angelo she showed considerable dramatic power and elicited hearty and spontaneous applause. If she did not make the character of Isabel as "enskied and sainted" as Shakespeare drew it, she made her saintliness stand out from the corruption about her.

Sheridan hardly fulfilled expectations. At times there was apparently a striking want of familiarity with his part. Yet he frequently showed the power that has given him the deserved reputation of being one of our leading actors.

Morrison on coming on to the stage was recognized and received a kind greeting from the audience. He had a difficult role but portrayed it in a way to elicit all the scorn that Shakespeare felt for his villain. He has a fine voice and rendered some passages, as the soliloquy in the last of act second, magnificently.

W. H. Thompson had the clearest conception of his part of any one in the company, unless we except Logan Paul. Lucio was a careless man of the world, living for pleasure, and yet not without fine feelings and an occasional serious thought amid his sneers. We saw this character on the stage more nearly as Shakespeare created him. When Mr. Sheridan leaves the company at Omaha Mr. Thompson will take his part as the Duke and we predict success.

Pompey had full justice done to his vile character in the representation of Logan Paul. He succeeded in injecting a great deal of humor into his part and provoked constant merriment.

The remaining parts were fairly taken, especially that of Elbow, by Belmour. We regret that a larger audience was not present. The house did not have within two hundred dollars of what Uncle Tom's Cabin had. Yet this company presented one of Shakespeare's plays and is the best stock company on the road. The play would have been very unsafe with some companies. We presume that this kept a good many away who did not know about a company so recently organized. But the fears were groundless. We hope the company will produce Cymbeline on its return here the last of the week. It is a rich treat in this city to listen to so good a company in so good a play.

Another Canadian Seizure.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The department of state is informed of the seizure at Cape Breton yesterday or to-day of the American fishing schooner, Sallie, M. Dougherty, of Portland, Me. No particulars are given.

PORTLAND, Maine, May 17. The report that the fishing schooner Ella M. Doughty, of Portland, Captain Warren Doughty, had been seized by the Canadian government was confirmed this morning by the following telegram to the outfitters:

ENGLISHTOWN, C. B., May 17.

Bergeants, Lane & Skillen, Portland:

Our vessel is seized by the government for buying bait. Our permit is no good here. See our collector about Bowdoin dead.

[Signed] WARREN A. DOUGHTY.

The vessel has the usual permit signed by Collector Anderson to touch and trade at all Canadian ports. The following has been sent Thos. F. Bayard, secretary of state, Washington:

The schooner Ella M. Doughty, of Portland, was seized at Englishtown, Stannes, C. B., for buying bait on permit from the Portland custom house to touch and trade.

(Signed) SERGEANT, LANE & SKILLEN.

A telegram has been sent Senator Frye, calling his attention to the matter. There is considerable excitement over the seizure.

Murderers Run Down.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Information reached here to-night that two men whom detectives believe were the men who boarded the night express on the Rock Island railway, murdered United States Express Messenger Kellogg and then robbed the safe of $20,000 in cash have been run down. Sunday morning succeeding the robbery two strangers took breakfast at the farm house of Orin Austin in Kendall county, some miles north of where the robbery was supposed to have been committed. They insisted on sitting with their faces toward door, and Mrs. Austin accidentally discovered that they were armed. After breakfast they hastily took to a neighboring clump of woods. Many other suspicious circumstances led to the belief that the pals were no others than the train robbers. With the breakfast incident as a clue the detectives have finally traced them, meanwhile accumulating evidence that they are the right persons. The men have been located in a small town where they are engaged in the cattle business and have been identified by farmer Austin. It is talked that the arrest, if not already made, will be made to-morrow.
